About Arizona.

We are indebted to Gov. McCormick of Arizona, for a copy of his Annual Message to the Territorial Legislature, delivered October 8th, from which we glean some valuable information:

The total Territorial indebtedness, as audited to this time, amounts to $21,051 41, and there is a balance of $249 59 in the treasury to the credit of the General Fund. Of the indebtedness $15,590 is payable in gold, being the amount of bonds (and interest on the same to January 4, 1867), issued under the Act of the First Assembly, approved November 2, 1864, and entitled "an Act to provide for the contingent expenses of the Territorial Government."

THE MINES.

If there is less excitement over our mining interests there is more confidence in their excellence, and a strengthened belief that their development will surprise the world. Ten quartz mills will have been erected in this county alone before the close of the present year. Those already in operation afford a gratifying evidence of the gold area, and as the leads are sunk upon they show permanence and size. The appearance of sulphurets and refractory elements at a certain depth may involve the necessity of more elaborate machinery, but no obstacle will, I think, be sufficient to baffle the enterprise of our miners, who, depending more upon their own energies and capital than upon help from abroad, are determined to know no such word as fail.

The rare advantages of wood, water and climate, are more than sufficient to offset the costs of living and the heavy expense of transporting machinery here; and I believe, as I have often asserted, that there are few localities upon the Pacific coast where quartz mining may be so economically, agreeably and profitably pursued.

AGRICULTURE.

The valleys of the Territory, more extensively cultivated this year than ever before, have produced an abundant harvest. The yield of corn, vegetables and small grain is such as to prove that henceforth we need not look abroad for food; and I make no doubt that if assured their crops will be bought and promptly paid for, and they are properly protected from Indian incursions, our ranchmen will, during the ensuing year, by the favor of Heaven, raise all the breadstuffs that may be required to subsist the military force in the Territory.

THE INDIANS.

The conflict with the Apaches continues, and will continue, I fear, until we are supplied with troops better suited to fight them, or the products of our mines is such as to attract a large population, and so literally to crowd them from the scene of action.

Whatever increase may be made in the military force in the Territory, and however zealous and intelligent those in command may be, I have little faith in any marked or substantial success in the subjugation of the Apaches until authority is given to employ the right material and in sufficient strength to maintain concerted, continuous, and increasing movements against them from many points in the Territory; a systematic and unintermitting aggressive war. On the score of economy the policy of employing native volunteers, in view of their easy subsistence, is especially worthy the consideration of the Government.

Within a few months past the Wallapais and Pah-Utes have behaved loyally, and there is ground for apprehension that unless promptly and severely dealt with they will seriously annoy the residents of Mohave and Pah-Ute counties, and interrupt travel upon several of our most important roads. From the small number of troops in the Territory, and the necessity of immediate, self-protection, you will be asked to authorize the raising of bands of rangers or minute-men in those counties, (and perhaps in others,) for service when needed, and to issue Territorial scrip as a compensation for their time, which scrip they will hope to have redeemed by the General Government at a future day.

THE REBEL FOREIGN LOAN.—The following note, calling attention to the value of the Confederate call loan, is sent to the editor of the London News:

LONDON, September 28, 1866.

On the part of the Committee I beg leave to say that they have the greatest confidence in the promises to pay, provided they were permitted to do so. They base their confidence not only on the information they receive from the South but likewise on the testimony given by General Robert E. Lee before the Reconstruction Committee appointed by Congress.

I trust, sir, your sense of justice and fair play will induce you to publish this testimony. I may further add, that no such political blunder was ever committed by any statesman who had the the restoration of the Union at heart as compelling the South to repudiate their debt, and especially the paltry foreign debt of 2,400,000, for which cotton was hypothecated. The result has been to retard the return of prosperity to the South, and to annihilate their credit in Europe. They required and still require money for the cultivation of their estates to enable them to grow more cotton, tobacco, sugar, and repair their railways. They offered any terms, but the fatal word repudiation, although forced on them, has been the stumbling block to their obtaining a Partisan Malignity.

Every commander is not a military genius. Nobody claims that all the Generals who were employed in the war against the rebellion were fit to command. Many failed. Probably a few of them had not their hearts in their work, and were to an extent, disloyal. But the career of many was unsuccessful, whose patriotism is undoubted, and whose earnestness in the service of their country is proven by their works. The military career of Gen. Banks was not a success, yet no man during the struggle evinced a more earnest devotion to his country. Gen. Butler failed as a military commander, yet none more constantly endeavored to do his duty. So with Gen. Burnside, Gen. Schurz, and many others of greater or lesser note. These men were not qualified to command armies, but their lack of military ability is no imputation on their patriotism. Yet a partisan press daily teems with the vilest abuse of them and of all other men who figured in the war, who did not achieve brilliant success. Every vile epithet in the knave's calendar is applied to Gen. Banks, Gen. Butler, and others of their class. The former is called a "cotton thief," and the latter is denominated a "beast." Imaginary accounts of their rapacity and cruelty are invented to shock the public mind. Now, why do not the malignant partisans who retail these stories also attack Grant, Sherman and Sheridan for their "inhumanity?" Did not Grant order the devastation of the Shenandoah valley, and did not Sheridan execute his command? Did not Sherman first remove the inhabitants of Atlanta from the city, and then reduce it to ashes? Did he not, in his march to the sea and through the Carolinas, destroy or carry off everything of value that he found in his path? Why not therefore assail those distinguished and successful commanders as well as those who were less successful than they? Because these partisans know that that Grant, Sherman and Sheridan occupy too high a place in the estimation of their countrymen to be injured by the malicious attacks of their foes. They who so virulently assail Banks and Butler, would, if they dared, assail Grant and Sherman with equal virulence. Their hatred of the latter is more bitter than their hatred of the former, and if they supposed they could drag Grant and Sherman down, they would spare no effort to do it. But as they cannot hope to succeed in this, they pursue the unsuccessful Generals of the war with fiendish malignity, though they are far less open to attack on the charges that are brought against them, than the leaders who crushed the rebellion would be on charges of the same kind.

Where it is Tending.

The rebels of Georgia think they have not lost their right of representation in Congress, and doubtless are also of opinion that they have lost no other right by their constitutional attempt to destroy the Government of the United States. To establish their rights they fall to quoting the Constitution with quite as much vigor as they quoted from that instrument during the rebellion to show that the Government had no right to take measures to prevent its own destruction. The criminal at the bar insists on being a member of the jury. He claims the right to have a voice in determining the penalties of rebellion in which he has participated. The constitutional amendment is rejected by the Georgia Legislature—the very result that was to be anticipated from the rebel State government which "my policy" established there. The Southern States, we are told, are, since the elections in North, more determined than ever to resist the amendment. They are still possessed of the same obstinacy and infatuation which led them to believe that they could successfully resist the power of the North. Johnson has taught them to assert that the amendment now pending was not proposed to the States by Congress in the manner prescribed by law, and that the proceeding is therefore unconstitutional. Georgia and Mississippi seem to have forgotten that they have already ratified an amendment proposed in the same manner as the one they now reject, and that their patron at the White House compelled them to ratify it. They did not quibble in this way about the anti-slavery amendment, though they would have done so had they then got the same encouragement from Washington which they now receive. The controversy of the South is producing its natural results. If those States refuse the amendment, the next Congress will abolish the governments which Johnson has set up, establish territorial governments, and begin at the bed-rock of justice in the matter of reconstruction. Things are tending rapidly toward this condition. The Southern people are deceiving and misleading themselves. They can no more contend against the political power of the North than they could contend against its military superiority. Their greatest enemies are their own blind obstinacy and Andrew Johnson.

"The Copperhead paper round the corner" thinks that about one hundred thousand Fenians voted with the Radicals in the late elections, but consoles itself with the reflection that they (the Fenians) are after all, nothing but a set of miserable Irish—"an element of disaffection, disturbance and revolution."

STATE ITEMS.

John Crawford, of Albany, last week fell into a ravine from a side walk and broke two of his ribs.

Harvey Smith, the Sheriff of Linn county, has lately been required to give additional bonds in the sum of $50,000—for what reason, is not stated.

If Sarah Ringo, or any of her children, who moved from Ray county, Missouri, to Oregon in 1850, see this, they are requested to write immediately to Wm. Hodge, at Columbia, Boone county, Missouri.

Mr. John Rigdon, one of a party who went out to prospect South-Eastern Oregon last summer, writes from Big Meadows, Oct. 15th, that they had not found any paying prospects of gold. The general feeling of the country is a doubt.

A correspondent at Starr's Point, Benton county, writes that the Gops. of Long Tom groaned deeply when they read (or had read to them) the late election news from the East; but they have not yet determined to "secede and set up for themselves."

The Eugene Journal is exultant at the privileges just now enjoyed by that village, of the revival of its former educational facilities. It says it is indicative of "a return of the palmy days when Lane county girls and boys repaired to an education without being shipped to Salem or Portland."

FROM VICTORIA.

From our Victoria files, to the 5th inst., we clip the following:

A number of Collins' Telegraph employees came down by the Enterprise yesterday. The train of pack animals have all arrived safely at Quesnellemouth and gone into winter quarters.

Reports from the Black Hawk Company's claim continue most encouraging. Upwards of $3,000 have been taken out in a short time, and the dirt is improving rapidly.

On Monday an inquest was held at Dawson's whale fishery, in Shawnigan, over the body of James, a Kanaka, who was killed on Salt Spring Island, on Saturday last, by Alexander Donaldson, during a dispute about a boat.

About 150 men have gone to the new diggings near Arrow Lake. The pay is said to be uniform and rich. The Forty-Nine, on her last down trip carried 25 men who were bound for the new mining locality.

Thirteen new buildings are in course of construction, at Port Townsend, W. T., to which place the Custom House will be soon removed.

A scared individual, who was dodging an infuriated bull behind a tree, exclaimed, "You ungrateful beast, you wouldn't toss a vegetarian who never ate beef in his life, would you? Is that the return you make?"

THEIR WORK IS NEVER FINISHED.—A Maine editor says he cannot imagine when editors have a leisure time, "unless it is after the ferryman carries us over Styx, and then we have no doubt the old fellow would besiege us for a puff on his boat."

[DESPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO NOVEMBER 15.

Arkansas Legislature.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 9.—The Arkansas Legislature convened yesterday. The Governor's Message recommends the ratification of the constitutional amendment and such legislation as will carry out the Civil Rights Bill.

Rejecting the Constitutional Amendment by Georgia.

The Georgia Legislature today rejected the Constitutional amendment. A resolution declining to ratify it being adopted unanimously in the Senate, all voting, and by one hundred and twelve against two in the House. The committee who reported the above resolution accompanied it with a lengthy argument, to show that the amendment could not be proposed without the representation of the States in Congress, and that neither Georgia nor any other State has lost its right of representation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Gen. Rufino Alfonso, the new Captain General of Cuba, arrived at Havana last Saturday to relieve Gen. Lersundi.

Letter from Paris—The French Interests in Mexico.

NEW YORK Nov. 9.—The Paris correspondent says that General Castelneau will arrange for the return of the French troops from Mexico en masse, as Napoleon thinks a march in detachments would be inconvenient. It was believed France would be relieved of the two huge incubi Rome and Mexico at the same time.

The Empress of Mexico, the Princess Carlotta, is afflicted with religious monomania during which she bewails the injuries done the church in Mexico. Her case is probably hopeless. Rumor says the unfortunate lady attempted suicide by jumping from a window.

A Munich letter says Baron Beat, Premier of Saxony, has lately been making a tour of Southern Germany and holding a long conference with the Emperor of Austria.

Wheat Market—Sailing of Gen. Sherman.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The wheat market is more active and two and three cents lower. Canada is quoted at $3 20.

The frigate Susquehanna sailed this afternoon with Gen. Sherman, Minister Campbell, Secretary Hunt and Col. Andrew Reid, of Sherman's staff on board. The departure was witnessed by a large number of people.

Fenian Threats.

The Fenians are threatening all sorts of things in retaliation on Canada and England, including the cutting of the Atlantic Cable near this side so that an expedition may sail to Ireland unheralded.

Mexican News.

Advices from Chihuahua, dated Oct. 7th, says Juarez went there with his cabinet and 800 soldiers. All North ern Mexico except Durango was in the hands of the Liberals, and the garrison of Durango was expected to shortly move back upon the Capital. Juarez has annulled the Louisiana Tehuantepec grant and made a new one with other Americans who pay $100,000 to the holders of the old grant for the money paid for it.

Fenian Trials at Toronto.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The court at Toronto yesterday condemned the Fenian William Hayden to be hanged on the 13th of December. Drummond was acquitted and two cases were postponed. There is an increasing number of suspicious persons in Toronto.

War Department Matters.

A Washington special chronicles the arrival of General Steadman yesterday, as significant of a change in the War Department. Stanton has been assailed by the Intelligencer, Republican and Star, during the past few days, it is said, by official inspiration.

Fernando Wood favors the Amendment.

Fernando Wood had an interview with the President yesterday, and the Republican says he favors the adoption of the Constitutional amendment.

Feeling in the Southern States.

The Southern papers very generally speak with bitterness of the result of the Northern elections, and declare the South is less inclined than before to accept the Constitutional amendment.

A committee appointed by General Humphrey, at the request of the Mississippi Legislature, has just arrived to present a petition to the President asking for the release of Jeff. Davis. They will have an interview with the President on next Monday.

Col. Fry Sails for California.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Col. James B. Fry, late Provost Marshal General, sailed in the steamer Arizona from New York, on Saturday, for California, to be Assistant Adjutant-General of the Division of the Pacific.

The Forthcoming Message—Appointments.

A Washington special dispatch says the President on Saturday laid before his Cabinet portions of his annual message.

Among late appointments are Gen. W. H. H. Taylor, as Postmaster at Cincinnati, and Albert Fisher, as U. S. Marshal of Oregon.

New York Items—Arrest of a Perjurer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Horace Greeley is being put promisingly forward for Senator vice Harris.

Hilton, a Wall street broker, arrested for attempting to sell stolen coupons, has been honorably acquitted.

Sanford Canovan, alias Dunham, the perjured witness against Jeff. Davis, was arrested in Washington on Saturday and lodged in jail, upon complaint of the United States Judge Advocate, which he deceived with bogus evidence.

The President's Mexican Policy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Reports having been circulated which throw discredit upon a previous announcement that Max had abdicated, it is now stated as the policy of the Government, that should Gen. Sherman and Minister Campbell find on their arrival at Vera Cruz, that nothing was being done, they will report to the President, who will, it is expected, recommend Congress to authorize vigorous measures to expedite the departure of the French troops. It is believed that the Mexican question will occupy a prominent place in the President's Message.

NEWS BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—A Berlin dispatch of the 9th, by the cable, says Prussia approves the appointment of Beust as the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs. An attempt to interfere with questions is considered settled. If this view be correct, it will only impel Prussia to more quickly complete her national work in Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Morning Herald says the mission of Gladstone to Rome is to reconcile the people to their fate.

The rumor of the failure of the Russo-Prussian alliance is unfounded.

The ship Young Eagle, Captain Walters, from Galles, is ashore at Denkirk.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Delegations from Frankfort last evening advise more of a better feeling in American securities. Five-twenties are unchanged.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 9.—The market is moderately active. Indian corn shows a decline of 3@6d per quarter.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Consols closed at 89½; 5-20's at 80.

At a recent banquet, Lord Derby made friendly allusions to America, hoping that any questions between the two governments might be approached in a conciliatory spirit, resolve all bitterness and cement friendship.

PARLIAMENT has again been prorogued.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—The Czarowitch and Princess Dagmar were married yesterday with great festivity.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12th.—Jacob Whitney commenced suit to-day against Thomas H. Thompson to compel the conveyance of certain lands in Napa county which had been pre-empted by plaintiff.

Judge Dunnelle to-day granted Margaret E. McGrath a divorce from her husband, Daniel McGrath, on grounds of extreme cruelty.

Michael Frade, who sustained a fracture of both legs by falling off an embankment on Third street, near Bryant, some weeks since, died of his injuries in the County Hospital last Saturday.

Judge Cowles this morning overruled the demurrer in the indictment against Henry Schwartz for arson.

The bark Dasgard, of the Prussian Telegraph expedition, arrived from Petropauloski yesterday. Fifteen operators and construction were left at that point, where they will winter. Col. Bulkley left there on the 23 August for Aradgar bay, to be gone about three months. The Russian war steamer Variag, left on the same day for Nickolaefski, with Dunlar with Count Lansdorf and Col. Jacoby, correspondent of the N. Y. Herald. The Russians and residents are extremely hospitable and kind to all connected with the telegraph enterprise.

By the arrival of the Hawaiian bark Bonito we have dates twenty-two days from Honolulu to Oct. 18th. On the 17th Hon. Mojesty left on the schooner Nettie Merrell, for Hilo via Lahaui. His suit consisted of fifty persons. A salute was fired from the Russian frigate Venetia, and also from the Punch Bowl. A Captain of the Venetia had an audience with the King on the 16th. An evening was to be given on the 22d by the garrison residents of Honolulu to the officers of the Venetia. Her Majesty, Queen Emma, had not arrived, but was expected hourly. The Vanderbilt however was not due, having been out from this port but six days.

Great complaint is made of the scarcity of money in Honolulu. Many of the merchants have foreigned for exchange for the whaling fleet.

The immortalist Mark Twain is writing letters from San Francisco for publication in the Honolulu papers.

There have been changes for the better in the management of the U. S. Marine Hospital.

Government has revived an old and effete law which is described in the Civil Code of 1859 as the Government Press. Therefore resurrection is that of the Director of the public press. Dr. J. Holt Smith has been appointed to the position.

Parties in the harbor have been trying the famous needle-gun. The experiments were satisfactory.

The Herald urges the necessity of one or more Light Houses for the harbor of Honolulu, and that they should be paid for out of moneys derived from the commerce of the port.

Destructive Fire at Sonora.

SONORA, Nov. 12.—Another destructive fire is raging here. The Union Hall is totally destroyed; so are the Methodist church, Linham's livery stable and Martin & McDonald's blacksmith shop. The fire was discovered at 12:15, and is still burning. Wright & Co., proprietors of the hotel, have suffered a severe loss, supposed to be about $10,000. Linham's loss is $3,000; Martin & Co., $500; Cox & Co., $10,000; Dowell $300. No clue to the perpetrator of the deed.

Rich Strike in Quartz.

PLACERVILLE, Nov 12.—The Woodside Quartz Mine, located at Georgetown, struck the richest quartz on Saturday last, that was ever seen in California. It is estimated by competent judges that over $50,000 were taken out on Saturday and Sunday. They are now blocking out nearly a pure solid mass of gold, three feet in length. This is no humbug. One piece alone weighed over 30 pounds.

LIFE INSURANCE.—Within the last few weeks a large number of our citizens have availed themselves of the benefit of a Life Insurance, which certainly is very praiseworthy, but one of those heavy BEAVER SUITS, for sale at the ST. The sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandize, which commands a ready sale in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increase the [illegible] of those who, by counterfeit imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G Venard Chartres Coffee. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of it consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless buyers should be forewarned and placed on their guard against this practice.

A Mother's Work

[By a crusty old bachelor who lives in a family where they "take other orders"]

To fling all day like a galley slave
Teaching the little brats how to behave
Hearing a older ones quarrel and fight
Stopping and cuffing till all their might
Washing, and brushing, at following meals
Such is the mother's work all the day closes

Sewing up rents in their best pants torn,
Into the new cloth over them sworn
Never once pausing to count the stitches
Or admiring aught the boys and the breeches
Thankful in heart when all by are out of the way
Such is a mother's life day by day

Seeking, each night, some old ancient bed,
Long, as to her the last word said
Which is the happy husband above
With all the warmth of a mother's love
Now may the good angels be that kind always,
That they never work like in the all day.

The Conflict at Gettysburg

The following graphic account of the conflict at Gettysburg is from Greeley's American Conflict We gave it as a specimen of the writer's great skill in battle descriptions

"Gettysburg, the capital of Adams county is a rural village of 3 000 inhabitants the focus of a well-cultivated upland region Though long settled and blessed with excellent country roads all centering on the borough, much of it is too rugged for cultivation, hence it is covered with wood The village is in a valley, or rather on the northern slope of a hill with a college and other edifices on the opposite hill, which rises directly from the little run at its font

'Part of our cavalry advance, under General Kilpatrick pushed out from Frederick moving north west through Liberty and Taneytown to Hanover, Pa, where they were considerably astonished by an attack from Stuart's cavalry—not imagining that there was any enemy within a march of them A sharp fight ensued, wherein General E F Farnsworth's brigade was at first roughly handled, losing 100 men, but Gen Custer's, which had passed, returned to its aid, and the enemy was beaten off A similar dash was simultaneously made on the train of another column of our cavalry at Littlestown, but easily repulsed Meantime, Gen Buford, with another division, had moved directly upon Gettysburg where he encountered the van of the rebel army, and r Gen Heth, of Hill s corps, and drove it back on the division, by whom our troopers were repelled in their turn And now the advance of Gen. Reynold's (1st corps,) under command of Gen. S S Wadsworth, approaching from Emmitsburg, quickened its pace at the familiar sound of volleys, and, rushing through the village, drove back the rebel van, seizing and occupying the ridge that overlooks the place from the northwest

"Gen John F Reynolds, formerly of the Pennsylvania Reserves, was in command of the two corps (1st and 11th) now rapidly coming up, together numbering about 22,000 men As Gen Wadsworth was forming his advance division, 4 000 strong, in order of battle, Gen Reynolds went forward to reconnoiter, and, seeing that the enemy were in force in a grove just ahead, he dismounted, and was observing them through a fence, when he was struck in the neck by a sharp shooter s bullet, and, falling on his face, was dead in a few minutes. Born in Lancaster, in 1820, entering the army in 1846, he had served his country in Mexico in California, and in nearly every important action yet fought in Virginia; returning to fall in defence of the soil of his native State, and almost in sight of his home

"Gen Abner Doubleday came up half an hour afterwards, and assumed command; but the residue of the corps with the whole of the 11th, did not arrive till nearly two hours later; meantime the rebels, under Hill, were too strong and pushed back Wadsworth's division, eagerly pursuing it As Wadsworth fell back with his left, and Archer pressed forward on his heels, the right of our division swung round on the rear of the pursuers, enveloping the rebel advance, and making prisoners of Archer and 800 of his men,

"Doubleday fell back to Seminary Ridge, just west of the village, where he was joined by the residue of his corps, the 11th coming up almost simultaneously and taking post on his right, Howard ranking Doubleday and assuming command assigning the 11th corps to Schurz. Here the struggle was renewed with spirit, our men having the better position and the best of the fight, until about 1 P M, Ewell's corps, marching from York under orders to concentrate on Gettysburg, came rapidly into the battle—Rhodes' division assailing the 11th corps in front, while Early's struck hard on his right flank Of course, being greatly outnumbered, the 11th was soon routed, falling back in disorder on Gettysburg, and compelling the 1st, which had fully held its own, to do likewise—the two divisions, under a heavy rebel fire, commingling and obstructing each other in the streets of the village, and thus losing heavily in prisoners Their wounded, who had thus far been taken to Gettysburg, were of course abandoned to the enemy, as the debris of the two corps, scarcely half the number that had marched so proudly through those streets a few hours before, fell hastily back and were rallied on Cemetery Hill, just south of the village, Buford with his troopers covering the retreat, and trying to show a bold front to the rebels, who—though there were still several hours of good daylight—did not see fit to press their advantage, presuming that our whole army was moving hatherward, and fearing they might miscalculate and suffer as Reynolds had just done

"And they were right For Gen Sickles, with his (3d) corps, which had advanced the day before from Taneytown to Emmitsburg, and had there received from Meade a circular to his corps commanders, directing a concentration on the line Pipe creek—the left of the army at Middleburg, the right at Manchester—had been preparing to move as directed to Middleburg, when, at 2 P M he received a dispatch from Howard at Gettysburg, stating that the 1st and 11th corps were there engaged with a superior force, and that Reynolds had been killed, thereupon calling urgently for assistance

"Sickles was perplexed Meade was at Taneytown, ten or twelve miles away, and to wait to hear from him was to leave Howard to his fate. Sickles had been moving on Gettysburg till halted by Meade's new circular, and he decided that he ought to pursue now; so, leaving two brigades and two batteries to Emmitsburg, he put the rest of his corps in rapid motion for Gettysburg, arriving just after Howard had taken post on Cemetery Hill, and coming into position on his left As he came up the Emmitsburg road, he might have been assailed by Hill's forces, holding the ridges on his left, but the enemy were satisfied with their day's work, and did not molest him

"Gen. Meade was at Taneytown, when, at 1 P M, news came that there was fighting at Gettysburg, and that Gen. Reynolds had been killed He, at once ordered Hancock to turn over his (2d) corps to Gibbon, hasten himself to Gettysburg, and take command there, which was done: Hancock reaching Cemetery Hill at 3½ P M., when the rear of our broken 1st and 11th corps was retreating in disorder through the village, hotly pursued by the triumphant foe. Howard having already formed a division on Cemetery Hill, Hancock ordered Wadsworth to post his, or what was left of it (1,600 out of the 4,000 he had led to battle in the morning,) on Culp's hill, at cornright, while Gen Geary, with the advance division of Slocum's (12th) corps, then coming up, was directed to take position on high ground toward Round Top, on our left. Meade had hurriedly requested Hancock to judge whether Gettysburg afforded as better ground for a battle than that he had selected on Pipe creek, and Hancock now (3 P M) sent word that he would hold on here until Meade could arrive and judge for himself But Meade had already impelled the 2d corps, under Gibbon, toward Gettysburg Hancock wrote him that the position here was good, but liable to be turned by way of Emmitsburg Slocum having arrived at 7, and ranking Hancock, the latter turned over the command, as he had been instructed to do, and rode back to Meade, whom he reached at 9 P M, when he was told by Meade that he had decided to fight at Gettysburg, and had given orders accordingly Both started for Gettysburg immediately, arriving at 11 P M

'During that night, our army was all concentrated before Gettysburg, save General Sedgwick's (6th) corps, which was at Manchester, 30 miles distant, when at 7 P M, it received orders to move at once on Taneytown, which were so changed, after it had marched 7 or 8 miles, as to require its immediate presence at Gettysburg, where it arrived, weary enough, at 2 P M next day

"Meantime, Lee also had been bringing up his several corps and divisions, posting them along the ridges north and west of Gettysburg and its rivulet, facing ours at a distance of one or two miles Longstreet's corps held his right, which was stretched considerably across the Emmitsburg road, the divisions of Hood, McLaws and Pickett, posted from right to left. Hill's corps including the divisions of Anderson, Pender, and Heth, held the center, while Ewell's, composed of Rhodes', Early's and Johnson s divisions, formed the rebel left, which bent well around the east side of our position, making the enemy's front considerably longer than ours. Of the entire rebel army that had crossed the Potomac, scarcely a regiment was wanting when Pickett's division, forming the rear guard, came up on the morning of the 2d

'On our side Sickles (3d) corps held the left, opposite Longstreet; supported by the 5th, (Sykes) with Hancock s (2d) in our center, touching its right while what was left of Howard s (11th), re-enforced by 2,000 Vermonters, under Stannard and Reynolds (1st, now Doubleday s) corps held the face of Cemetery hill looking toward Gettysburg and Early's division but menaced also by Johns n's division on its right and by Hill s corps facing us left The 1st corps (Slocum's) held our extreme right being John son's division of Ewell s corps and it recently been strengthened by Lockwood s Maryland brigade 2 000 strong coming to a little over 10 000 men Buford's cavalry pretty roughly handled the 1 t was first sent to the rear to recruit, but confronted Stuart in our extreme right before the close of the 2d, Adjutant Meade's division being posted on our left

'Meade had resolved to fight a defensive battle but, as subsequent events proved, had not yet come up while the whole rebel army but fairly be presumed present it was not his interest to force the fighting Lee had given orders to Stuart commanding on our right, for an attack on that wing with the 12th, 5th and 6th corps so soon as the 6th should arrive but bloomin after reconnoitering, reported that the ground in his front was unfavorable whereupon, the attack was countermanded The enemy not being yet ready the morning were out and the day were on with the usual skirmishing and rebel firing at intervals along the front, with occasional shots from batteries on one side or the other but nothing approaching a great battle

"At 3 P M—Sedgwick's weary corps having just arrived—Sykes was ordered to move the 5th corps over to our left, while Meade rode out to see it properly posted on the left of the 3d, the 6th resting in reserve behind them He now found that Sickles (who was very eager to fight, and seems to have suspected that Meade was not) had thrown forward his corps from half to three-fourths of a mile, so that, instead of resting his right on Hancock and his left on Round Top, as he had been directed to do his advance was in fact across the Emmitsburg road and in the woods beyond, in the immediate presence of the rebel army Meade remonstrated against this hazardous exposure which Sickles considered within the scope of the discretion allowed him but said he would withdraw, if desired, from the ridge he then occupied to that behind it, which Meade indicated as the proper one Meade replied that he apprehended that in such withdrawal would be permitted by the enemy, and as he spoke, the rebel batteries opened, and their charging columns came on

"Lee had ordered Longstreet to attack Sickles with all his might, while Ewell should assail Slocum on our right, and Hill, fronting the apex of our position, should only menace but stand ready to charge if our troops facing him should be withdrawn or seriously weakened to re inforce either our left or our right

'Sickles' new position was commanded by the rebel batteries posted on Seminary ridge in his front, scarcely half a mile distant, while magnificent lines of battle, a mile and a half long, swept up to his front and flanks, crushing him back with heavy loss, and struggling desperately to seize Round Top at his left

"Meade regarded the hill as vital to the maintenance of our position, and had already ordered Sykes to advance the 5th corps with all possible haste to seize and hold it A fierce and bloody struggle ensued, for the enemy had nearly carried the hill before Sykes reached it, while Humphreys who, with one of Syke's divisions, had been posted in the morning on Sickles' right was in turn assailed in front and flank, and driven back with a loss of 2 000 out of 5 000 men Ultimately, as Sickles' corps fell back in disorder to the ground from which he should not have advanced, Hancock closed in from the right, while parts of the 1st, of the 6th, and a division of the 12th corps, were thrown in on the enemy's front, and they in turn were repelled with loss, falling back to the ridge to which Sickles had advanced, and leaving our line where Meade had intended to place it.

"Meanwhile, the withdrawal of a division from Slocum had enabled Ewell to assail our right wing in superior force, crowding part of it back considerably, and seizing some of its rifle pits Hence, just at dark, the enemy assailed the right of Howard's shattered 11th corps, holding the right face of Cemetery Hill, but gained no essential advantage

"Night closed the 2d, day of July and of the battle, with the rebels decidedly encouraged and confident Of the seven corps composing our army, three had been severely handled, and at least half their effective strength demolished Reynolds, commanding the 1st, and Brig Gen Zook, of Sickles's corps, had been killed, Sickles, of the 3d, had had his leg shattered by a cannon ball, and was out of the fight, our total losses up to this hour were scarcely fewer than 20,000 men, and none were arriving to replace them The ground whereon Reynolds had fought and fallen so gallantly was about the center of their army, they held that also on which Howard had been cut up, and that from which Sickles had been hurled in disorder True, they also lost heavily; but they had reason for their hope that the morrow's triumph would richly repay all their losses.

"The battle opened next day on our right, where Slocum—his division having returned from the left—pushed forward to retake his lost rifle-pits, and did it after a sharp conflict, re-establishing his line, and resting upon it. Meantime, Lee had re-enforced Longstreet with three fresh brigades, under Pickett, which arrived from Chambersburg an hour or two before Sedgwick came up on our side, a division from Ewell, and two defeated from Hill, and the rebel left was firmly established and its batteries planted on the ridge whence Sickles had been driven

"There was a pause of anxious expectation, fitfully broken by spits of firing here and there, while the rebels were making their dispositions and posting their batteries for the supreme effort which was to decide this momentous contest At length, at 1 P M the signal was given, and 115 heavy guns from Hill's and Longstreet's front crossed their fire on Cemetery hill, the center and key of our position! Here, a little behind the crest, was Mead's headquarters, though the hill had been plowed by rebel balls during the fierce fighting of the eve before—some of them coming over from our left and annoying our soldiers on the right. For nearly two hours this hill was gashed and seamed by round shot and torn by bursting shells, while perhaps 100 guns from our side made it reply But the enemy had concentrated their batteries for this trial, while we had not, and here was no broad river valley, like that of the Rappahannock at Fredericksburg, to render the fire from bluff to bluff an idle squandering of ammunition The range was excellent the rebel batteries as well posted as ours, while superior in number and average caliber, so that, gradually, the fire on our side slackened, and at length nearly ceased Meade or Howard finding that our guns had become heated, gave the order to cease firing and cool them, though the rebel balls were still decimating our gunners, while our infantry, crouching behind every projection and nestling in each hollow, awaited patiently the expected charge And now from behind the cemetery batteries emerged their infantry in line of battle, three or four miles long, preceded by a cloud of skirmishers and supported by a line of reserves, moving swiftly to the charge on Cemetery hill and Hancock's corps more especially, but upon the centre front westward to Round Top."

General Geary s Speech to the Boys in Blue

PHILADELPHIA, October 10th —Forney's Press publishes a speech made by General Geary at Hamburg to the boys in blue, in honor of the Radical victory in the State in which he says it permanently establishes these facts "That the Government of the United States is vested in the American people, and in their representation in Congress assembled, and not in a corrupt Executive, that rebel and revengeful traitors, defeated in battle, shall not be restored to citizenship to rule the country they attempted to destroy, that when our forefathers declared men capable of self government they rejected the heresy of human slavery and pledged equal political rights to all their successors, that hereafter the citizens represented in the State and national legislatures must be clothed with the rights of citizenship that all the agencies of the Government, civil and military, must be perseveringly and sternly exercised to protect, vindicate and if need be, avenge our oppressed brothers in the South against the savage persecutions of the rebels who are still so impenitent and defiant that even Andrew Johnson fears to pardon them Having fortified these great truths against all future dangers, it is for us of Pennsylvania to maintain the forward position we have so proudly and gloriously won The attempt to restore the traitors of the South and to revive the Copperheads of the North has proved to be a galvanism so brief that the failure has consigned both to a deeper death and to a darker grave than that they occupied before"

A NEW CABALISTIC COMBINATION —A letter from New York, to the Sacramento Union, contains the following

Speaking of drinking reminds me of an advertisement which I saw in the Tribune a day or two since It was headed $10,000 and read as follows

KOOUTAH!—WANTED A PARTNER TO BOTTLE the unadulterated Koo ta ah (Cou ga nut) the best grapes and imported in pipes from France. Address A C D Tribune Office

What this all means your correspondent freely confesses himself unable to explain

A certain paper speaks of the President's speeches as "champagne" documents The apparent slander is, perhaps, only a typographical blunder, and "campaign" may have been the word intended

Dialect of the Mining Region

Bayard Taylor writes as follows to the N Y Tribune of his late experiences in Colorado

I took quarters at the St Nicholas hotel of which I will only say the board is $3 per day The accomodations of the house caused me considerable inconvenience at first; I felt a peaceful audience for an hour or two would scarcely walk twenty steps without halting to take breath, and have had bleeding at the nose for three mornings in succession This is a common complaint with new comers and the old settlers can always recognize such by their bloody pocket handkerchiefs The days are hot and rather sultry, but the mornings and evenings are lovely in their freshness, clearness and the delicious purity of the air I do things are hardly to be surpassed,—water and sleep The water is like crystal, and so agreeable to the palate that I am tempted to drink when not thirsty It is said to contain a slight proportion of alkali and a common expression among the people attributes their proverbial to the "thin air and alkali water" The properties of the latter, however, are said to be aphrodisiac which is rather an advantage than otherwise in a new country As for sleep, I don't know when I have found it so easy to obtain or so difficult to relinquish When I awake in the morning, the half conscious sense that I have been asleep is so luxurious that I immediately sleep again, and each permitted nap is sweeter than the last The people seem to be remarkably healthy Incipient disease of the lungs is almost always healed in this high and dry atmosphere, while it is fatal to the more advanced stages Rheumatism and the mountain fever are the most usual ailments There is at the same time less tendency to disease, and less recuperative power when a person is once attacked

Perhaps the "thin air and alkali water" may account for the rage for owning "claims" and "lodes," which seem to possess all classes of the community Every man you meet has his pocket full of specimens When you are introduced to a stranger he produces a piece of blossom rock," a "sulphuret" or a "chloride" The landlord of the hotel where you stop confidently informs you that he owns 2,000 feet—the richest lode in the country—assays $1 300 to the cord, sir The clerk is the happy possessor of 10 000, the porter (where there is any) has at least 5 000, while the chambermaid boasts of her own Susanna lode." The baker has specimens besides bread, the dispenser of lager beer looks important and mysterious, the druggist is likely to gave you 'chloride' instead of aperients, and the lawyer, who takes his pay in "feet" (money being scarce) dreams of realizing millions after the Pacific railroad reaches Denver

I have disgusted several individuals by refusing to buy, but the jargon has already infected my speech, and after hearing a man at the table ask, 'Is there a pay streak in that bacon?' I found myself on the point of asking the waiter to put a little more "sulphuret" in my coffee The same waiter afterward said to me 'Pie's played out, sir" If I had then requested him to "corral the tailings," he would have brought me the fragments from the other plates

The Colorado dialect in other respects is peculiar A dwelling house is invariably styled a "shebang," and the word in many cases, is very appropriate The Spanish word corral (always pronounced correll) has become completely naturalized, and is used as a verb, meaning to catch or collect A supply of any kind is an "outfit"—a man does not shout, but "lets a yell out of him," and one who makes a blunder cuts open a dog" I cannot recall at this moment, half the peculiarities of the dialect, but I am learning them as fast as possible in order to conform to the ways of the country
